

Memorial & Liberation Commemorations 2017

“Internationality Unites”

"In memory of the blood shed by all peoples, in memory of the millions of brothers assassinated by Nazi-Fascism, we solemnly swear to never abandon this path. We want to erect the most beautiful monument that one could dedicate to the soldiers who have fallen for the cause of freedom of the international community on a secure basis: A world of free men!

"We direct ourselves to the entire world, shouting: help us in this work!

"Long live international solidarity!

"Long live freedom!"

(extract from the Mauthausen Oath)

Each year, the Austrian Mauthausen Committee (MKÖ) organises and coordinates the events surrounding the anniversary of the liberation of Mauthausen Concentration Camp in close cooperation with partners on a national (Austrian Camp Community Mauthausen) and international (Comité International de Mauthausen) level, the largest memorial and liberation commemoration events in Europe, held at the Mauthausen Memorial Site. More than 6000 people, including many survivors of the Mauthausen Concentration and its sub-camps as well as important politicians from Austria and abroad took part in the international memorial and liberation commemorative events in 2016. As over 90% of the victims of Mauthausen Concentration Camp were neither German nor Austrian, the commemorative events therefore have particular international significance and represent the largest memorial and liberations events of their kind.

As well as the main liberation commemorations, many more memorial events will also take place at the sites of the sub-camps of Mauthausen and other places of Nazi terror. In 2016, more than 80 memorial events took place throughout Austria! The majority of these events, attended by many people from the immediate region, but also by visitors from many other European countries, were organised by local organisations and initiatives in close cooperation the MKÖ.

Since 2006, the memorial and liberation commemorations have been framed each year by a special theme, something directly linked to the history of Mauthausen Concentration Camp and Austria's Nazi past. The link to the present is always an important aspect of the chosen theme and should help young people especially draw direct links between their lives and experiences and the ideology of National Socialism. This year's memorial and liberation events will have the theme “internationality unites”.

Ensuring the memorialisation of the victims of Nazi crimes, particularly those who were imprisoned in Mauthausen Concentration Camp and sub-camps, as well as engaged involvement in anti-fascism and anti-racism work with young people are key aspects of the work carried out by the MKÖ. The MKÖ has been able to reach 63,000 young people in recent years through civil courage training, guided tours through the memorial site of Mauthausen concentration camp and its sub-camps, the pre-visit preparation and post-visit work, anti-racism workshops such as the workshop “Wir sind alle”, the racism simulation game “Miramix” as well as diverse event-related and thematic youth projects. In autumn 2016, the first tours took place as part of the new educational project “denkmalwien”.

“Internationality Unites”

The national perspective is in many aspects a dominant and ever-growing factor in Europe and worldwide. With an emphasis on, and elevation of, national interests, other positions can be at the same time be disparaged, made fun of or categorised as “foreign” or “other”. Such discourses might be expected more in the darkest chapters of recent history, and not in the 21st century – nevertheless these tendencies continue to grow, supported and depressed by populists. Internationality, something which has always had pluralistic, balancing and mediating aspects, is considered less as a virtue and more as a threat to national interests.

It was the survivors of Mauthausen Concentration Camp who declared on 16th May 1945 in their Mauthausen Oath: “After regaining our freedom and fighting for the freedom of our nations, we want to preserve and remember the international solidarity of the camp and draw our lessons from it.”

This oath and the obligation to support internationality is something that we wish to continue today – there are no problems and no challenges that can be solved only on a national level and nothing is solved through nationalism. Every form of nationalism is combined with the denigration of the “other” and acts to prevent the development of open and tolerant opinions. Nationalism in every form serves only the agitator, those who cannot bear civil coexistence as it robs them of the basis on which they trade. This is true for the larger problems of our time, problems that can only be solved internationally, as well as the smaller aspects of daily life and memorialisation in Mauthausen.

There is no victim group that has more worth than another, simply because they come from a different country. There is no victim group that is less important just because there are less of them. The National Socialists persecuted all people who did not conform to their nationalist, racist and ideological schema, often with the same, deadly consequences.

We owe it to the tens of thousands of victims of Mauthausen to understand our commemorations in an international context. We are obliged by the Mauthausen Oath to reject any form of nationalism and to build our work on the fundamental principle of internationality.

This is the case both for memorialisation in Mauthausen as well as in our work fighting for a fairer, more social and more human world.

The image is a colorful event poster for 'Fest der Freude' (Festival of Joy). It features a large green circle with the title 'Fest der Freude' in white. To the left, a pink circle contains the date and time: '8. Mai 19.30 Uhr Heldenplatz Wien'. To the right, a blue circle contains a quote from Lucia Heilman: '„ICH WAR ENDLICH BEFREIT. EIN GEFÜHL, DAS MAN NICHT BESCHREIBEN KANN. ICH WAR GLÜCKLICH, ICH WAR SELIG!“' and identifies her as 'Zeitzeugin Lucia Heilman über April 1945'. Other elements include a pink circle with 'Gratis Konzert', a blue circle with 'Tag der Befreiung', and a green circle with 'Wiener Symphoniker'. The website 'www.mkoe.at' is in a pink circle at the bottom left. A portrait of Lucia Heilman is in the top right.
