

PROGRAM COMMEMORATION AND LIBERATION CEREMONIES 2023 „CIVIL COURAGE“

Organized by Mauthausen Committee Austria and our local initiatives and associations

“In memory of the blood shed by all peoples, in memory of the millions of brothers assassinated by Nazi-Fascism, we solemnly swear to never abandon this path. We want to erect the most beautiful monument that one could dedicate to the soldiers who have fallen for the cause of freedom of the international community on a secure basis: A world of free men! We direct ourselves to the entire world, shouting: help us in this work!”

(Excerpt from Mauthausen Oath of liberated prisoners on 16 May 1945)

The International Commemoration and Liberation Ceremony at the Memorial Mauthausen and at sites of its former satellite camps has been organized and conducted since 1946 by the camp survivors and their associations. As the successor organization of the Austrian Association of Mauthausen Survivors, Mauthausen Committee Austria has taken over this task and will organize these celebrations in 2023 on the occasion of the 78th anniversary of the liberation of the Mauthausen Concentration Camp.

Because over 90 percent of the victims were neither German nor Austrian, to us, the commemoration of the victims of the Mauthausen Concentration Camp and its satellite camps has international significance. The International Commemoration and Liberation Ceremony is the largest ceremony of its kind worldwide. In addition to the main ceremony in Mauthausen, each year sees over 110 memorial events at locations of former satellite camps of Mauthausen CC and other sites of Nazi terror throughout Austria. Tens of thousands of visitors each year take a powerful stand: „Never again!“.

Each year we dedicate the Commemoration and Liberation Ceremonies to a special theme. Relevance to the present is an essential component of each annual theme. This is intended to provide young people in particular with reference to their world of experience today through an examination of the Nazi era and ideology. This year's Commemoration and Liberation Ceremonies are dedicated to “Civil Courage” (details on the next page).

The legacy of CC survivors (mkoe.at/aams) forms the foundation of Mauthausen Committee activities. In addition to commemoration of the victims of Nazi crimes, especially crimes against prisoners held in Mauthausen CC and its satellite camps, other areas of focus are right-wing extremism, knowledge transfer, and decisive anti-fascist and anti-racist work, especially with young people.

COMMEMORATION AND LIBERATION CEREMONIES 2023 „CIVIL COURAGE“

The use of the term civil courage dates back to 1848. The factors that lead to acts of civil courage always remain the same. However, the framework of conditions within which they take place in change over time. A special situation with regard to the scope for acts of civil courage can be found in authoritarian and highly repressive contexts. For example, during the National Socialist era, acts of civil courage, which very quickly crossed the narrow boundaries of the system, became acts of resistance against the regime.

People who resisted or rescued others, who initiated courageous individual actions against authorities or officials, and who led resistance activities in factories or in armament production, were mostly reported after the collapse of the system. But even then, the public recognition of acts of civil courage came late, often years or decades later, if at all. The courageous actions of a few people at a time when the majority lived in an adapted way or “tagged along” often triggered feelings of guilt or shame later on, which not infrequently even led to doubts or defenses of these actions. From today’s perspective, the term civil courage seems hardly suitable for the behaviour of people who helped other people during the National Socialist era, who took action against the National Socialists, or who joined the resistance. For all those who, as a result of their actions, fell into the repressive machine of the National Socialists were accused, persecuted, degraded, punished and all too often had to pay with their lives.

Such conditions are among the most extreme for demonstrating civil courage. The regime pursued acts that were classified as resistant or “criminal” with brutal severity and arbitrariness. The population lived in an atmosphere of total surveillance and legal uncertainty, which made the need for self-protection and the fear of repression understandable and justified. In the 1970s, psychologist Revital Ludewig-Kedmi turned to the results of the study by American political scientist Manfred Wolfson from the 1960s: Her investigation revealed that the majority of the rescuers were “ordinary” people who had neither special financial resources nor large homes, no better education or important contacts. An important insight, two-thirds of the helpers were women.<sup>1</sup>

One example for helpers were the Langthaler family from Upper Austria’s Mühlviertel. Anna Hackl, the daughter of Maria Langthaler, and her family hid two escaped Soviet concentration camp prisoners – risking their own lives.

“I thought, if anyone comes to me, I will not let them be shot, I will help them and hide them,
I have five boys in the war and I also want all five to come back. And they also have families and mothers.”<sup>2</sup>

„CIVIL COURAGE“

The „Mühlviertel Manhunt“ was a horrific hunt for around 500 escaped Soviet prisoners from the Mauthausen concentration camp towards the end of the Second World War. In this war crime, the civilian population was also called upon to take part in the hunt for escaped „Serious Offenders“, as they were called by the SS. Many people responded to the call of the SS; terrible atrocities were committed. Few tried to help the escaped prisoners by, for example by putting potatoes outside the door or hanging clothes for them outside. The Langthaler family, however, showed outstanding civil courage and saved the lives of two escaped prisoners.

Helpers were not born or raised as such, they were not necessarily better people. In many cases, a specific situation triggered their civil courage, and they went above and beyond with inventiveness and perseverance. Many of them were religiously or politically motivated.

Legal philosopher Arthur Kaufmann aptly compared the relationship between civil courage, non-violent political actions, civil disobedience, protest and resistance (where the boundaries are sometimes fluid, especially in the political sphere) was by the with the „small-coin right of resistance“.

„One should not underestimate the importance of such small resistance. This small resistance has to be put up constantly, so that great resistance is not required again one day. This great resistance demands great sacrifices, it may cost one's life. The small resistance, that is, the resistance that is possible and necessary in democracy, costs courage and civil courage.“<sup>3</sup>

Civil courage is a more visible resistance out of conviction. Acts of civil courage are about the everyday freedom of expression, about accepting contradiction, about commitment against the discrimination of people who stand up for law and justice, and about respect for human dignity. Orientation towards humanitarian and democratic values as well as personal courage are important components of acts of civil courage.

Today we are not only increasingly becoming victims, but also witnesses of racism, verbal threats of violence and death, bullying, exclusion and discrimination. We are also increasingly confronted with this problem on online platforms. Cyberbullying, online hate, conspiracy theories and fake news have been on the rise for many years.

Racism, discrimination and violence cannot be eliminated overnight. However, a lot can be achieved in small steps. That is, when people look, when the uninvolved intervene to help and when victims do not remain powerless.

More information about civil courage and examples of civil courage today can be found in the brochure „Zivil.Courage.Wirkt“, which is available download free of charge at www.zivilcourage.at, and can be found on www.zivilcourageonline.at and the associated free App.

In recent years, we have been confronted with many new challenges concerning the way we commemorate the Shoah: The last contemporary witnesses are dying, the historical message has long since failed to reach all of society, and the warning message commemoration conveys is apparently not enough to prevent anti-semitism from becoming more widespread and more overt. What effect do ritualized days of remembrance still have today? What about the culture of remembrance and what warnings the Shoah holds for the present? And could digital media offer new opportunities?

These and many other questions will be discussed at this conference on forms of commemoration in the 2020s.

Since then the association has dedicated itself to "commemoration and remembrance": holding commemorative ceremonies, symposia, benefit concerts. In addition, talks and negotiations with public authorities at federal, province and municipal level are intended to initiate a new policy of dealing with the past and a new culture of remembrance in Burgenland. In the spring of 1945, the Nazis drove more than 15,000 people, most of them Hungarian jews, on so-called death marches from the overcrowded concentration camp of Mauthausen to Gunskirchen satellite camp. During the three-day long foot march, about 6,000 people lost their lives. At Gunskirchen camp, 200-300 people starved daily, or they died from dysentery or a typhus epidemic. 1,030 of these victims were buried on Wels cemetery, where a memorial stone was erected upon initiative of the Wels Antifa in 2001.

Commemoration
for the resistance fighters who were murdered on 28 April 1945.
The memorial plaque, which was unveiled in 2001 in memory of the 42 antifascists who were gassed on 28 and 29 April 1945, is an important symbol of commemoration for the political resistance in Austria. The majority of the 42 were part of the so-called "Welser Gruppe" (engl.
Wels group), that the Gestapo broke up in 1944.
